

Distance between Structure and Chimney, V-Canyon, Saddle, or Ridge top

Topography affects fuels and their availability for combustion; it can also affect the direction and rate of spread of wildland fires. In general, the greater the distance of the structure from hazardous topographical conditions, the lower the probability of extreme fire behavior around the structure.